Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 14 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Starting mainly fine but cold. Milder, wet and windy later.

Today:
A bright but cold morning in many areas, with a raw-feeling wind and perhaps the odd fleeting snow flurry. Becoming increasingly cloudy and windy into the afternoon, with coastal gales developing as rain makes very gradual progress eastwards. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Very gradually becoming milder from the west through the night, but tempered by rain and strong winds. Perhaps drier but rather cloudy and murky in western parts by dawn. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Monday:
Rain soon clearing east, leaving low cloud and mist that should slowly clear to sunny spells, in a milder day than of late. Perhaps turning cloudier later, with evening rain. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Much milder than of late, but changeable and often rather windy, with some rain possible on all days of the period. Probably brightest on Wednesday, with some sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.